A NATIVE AMERICAN HERBAL TEA Ojibwa Tea of Life™ of Denver, Colorado, is NOT affiliated with any other Ojibwa Tea company. There are other companies who have the word "Ojibwa" in their name. Please do not confuse "Ojibwa Tea of Life" with any other companies using the name "Ojibwa Tea".

Ojibwa Tea of Life™ is an essiac tea four-herb blend. We offer you choices of our products in the following ways: Traditional Ojibwa Tea of Life (herbal blend), Essence of Ojibwa Tea of Life (Tincture/Extract), Ojibwa Tea of Life Concentrate (Pre-made ready to use), and Ojibwa Native Healing Balm (A soothing luxurious emollient skin salve).

Our products are pure, non-irradiated, organically grown and affordable. Essiac (pronounced "es-ee-ack") is an herb tea formula attributed to Canadian nurse Rene Caisse (reen-case) of Bracebridge Ontario, Canada. Rene claimed the formula was given to her by a miner's wife who was seemingly cured of breast cancer by an herb recipe. These herbs were given to her by "a very old Indian medicine man".

In 1922, Rene named the formula "Essiac" after the backward spelling of her own last name, Caisse. The recipe from "a very old Indian Medicine Man", allows for many stories and theories. There has never been "proof" of the actual tribal heritage of the Medicine Man who offered this formula, as many Native American Tribes lived in the area at the time.

Rene Caisse spent her life working with this herb tea, until she died in 1978 at the age of 90. For a time, the Canadian Minister of Health allowed Rene to treat certain terminally ill patients in her Bracebridge clinic. According to Rene, many of the people she treated reported they were helped by the remedy while others claimed living with their illness was made more bearable.
